

National Work Zone Awareness Week (April 26-30)

Drive Safe

Work zones, whether road construction or utility work, need everyone's undivided attention. Remember, when approaching anyone working on the side of the road, slow down, follow signs, and be alert. In Minnesota, it's the law.

Work Safe

Work zone safety begins with workers who are dedicated to keeping everyone safe. Each year, our field employees are trained with the skills they need to keep themselves, and their colleagues, safe.

Save Lives

When we work together in the name of safety, we can save lives.

Spring Field Preparation

Many farmers are busy preparing tillage equipment, sprayers, and planters for spring field work. We encourage these members to look for electric hazards around the farm as they prepare for planting. Here are some important ones to remember:

- If power lines on your property start to sag so low you cannot work safely, contact us. Never try to move a power line on your own.
- If a guy wire is broken, it can become charged with electricity. If you break a guy wire, call us to fix it, do not do it yourself.
- Farmers may want to consider moving or burying power lines around buildings or busy pathways where many farm activities take place.
- Everyone should know where underground utilities are located, and how to avoid them. Before digging, call 8-1-1.
